EDUCATION

Ph.D. University of Munich, 1995. Philosophy, magna cum laude.

(Full doctoral scholarship of the Hanns Seidel Stiftung, Munich)

Completed doctoral studies in art history and history; also initial studies of theology, 1995/6.

Thesis: Gott, Freiheit, Weltenwahl. Die Metaphysik der Willensfreiheit zwischen Antonio Perez, S. J. (1599-1649) und G.W. Leibniz (1646-1716).

Thesis committee: Robert Spaemann und Rolf Schönberger (now Regensburg)

Published: Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1997 (Brill's Studies in Intellectual History 72)

This study investigates the origins of the concept of "the best of all possible worlds". It exemplifies the character of modern metaphysics, which thinks mainly in terms of freedom and possibility. The book contains three parts. The first part tries to reconstruct this concept both historically and systematically; it deals with the concept of possibility beginning with High Scholasticism. The second part investigates the origins of this idea in the Jesuit theory of "scientia media", which is concerned with human freedom and divine foreknowledge. The third part deals with the question, whether there is any necessity to choose the best - a main theme in late scholastic thought of the 17th century. This investigation of a concept unknown before the time of Leibniz, reveals many new sources and fills a gap in the history of ideas.

M.A. Graduate Theological Union, Berkeley, 2002. Theology.

Thesis: Beyond Modernism? - George Lindbeck and the Linguistic Turn in Theology

Thesis committee: Richard Schenk, Timothy Lull, William O'Neill

Published: Neuiried: Ars Una 2005 (Beiträge zur Fundamentaltheologie und Religionsphilosophie, Band 9)

This study deals with the impact of contemporary philosophy on fundamental theology as exemplified in the theory of the Lutheran theologian George Lindbeck. Lindbeck uses Wittgenstein and the "linguistic turn" to develop a postmodern (or "postliberal") conception of theology; his position is contrasted with modern as well as a traditional approaches. This book is a fundamental attempt to bring modern discussions of epistemology and philosophy of language into dialogue with Aristotelian and Thomist traditions. The first part gives a critical analysis of George Lindbeck's position. It shows some of the internal problems that his proposal is generating (part II); but it also treats his larger claim to provide a "third paradigm" beyond both modernism and the traditional "cognitive-propositional" understanding of dogma. While Lindbeck's "postmodern" approach and modernism appear to be two sides of the same coin, the traditional approach, based on a renewed Thomistic epistemology and philosophy of language, is proposed as a deeper synthesis (part III).

M.A. University of Freiburg, Germany, 1990. History (highest grade)
Studies in History, Art History, Greek and Philosophy

M.A. thesis: Antoine Nicolas Servin and the Development of Criminal Law in the French Enlightenment and Revolution

Thesis director: Ernst Schulin

Little study has been done on the intense discussion of criminal law in the second half of the 18th century, even though many important figures contributed (e.g. Marat, Robespierre, Brissot, Voltaire, Iselin). This thesis explores the theories of criminal law in the French Enlightenment by locating one of the authors (A.N. Servin) in the context between radical theories and the authors of the Ancien Régime. It also looks at the larger history of criminal law and the actual historical practice, which often diverged from the theories.
